I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The author raises a crucial question: what challenges do museums face in modern digital era. On the one hand, digital tools are being used to create innovative experiences for visitors. But digital objects are pretty much a complex and require new approaches. On the other hand, digital transformation in museum industry is inevitable. Museums are parameters of social and cultural change. They must stay relevant and adapt to meet the needs of their visitors and audiences by moving towards innovative solutions. I believe that museums are even more important nowadays even though we live in an era of technology. What is more, new technologies should help save valuable collections, but at the same time provide access to people from over the world.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel makes you a more grateful person.

In Robert Maisel's book "Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures" it is stated that travel makes a more grateful person. Through the development of countries, cultures and human lives people continue to study and explore the world by travelling across the globe. Life is made up of experiences, and those that come from the gift of travel are the richest. Travelling gives everybody a great opportunity to try new food, visit new places, hear new sounds, meet new people, explore sites, note things people previously took for granted. Some of these experience are life-changing, so people should be grateful for their growth and new skills. Besides, during our trips we also meet amazing people when we travel. Some of them can become incredible longtime friends. That's why just by being able to travel, there's a lot to be thankful for.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

He quickly looked through his wallet and realised that he can't pay for their meals. His girlfriend noticed his reaction and giggled. She knew that this restaurant costs an arm and a leg, but the food in this restaurant is unlike any other. The girl made a proposal to spilt the bill and the man agreed. They happily paid the bill and went for a wonderful walk afterwards.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One day a man named Mike was on his way to a date with his new girlfriend. While walking in the park he saw beautiful tulips growing nearby. Mike thought that it would be a good idea to gift these flowers to his loved one, so he rushed to collect them while nobody was looking. He arranged the flowers in a bouquet and proceeded to walk. A few minutes later Mike noticed a police officer standing in the distance and decided to approach him cautiously. The police officer found the bouquet suspicious and realised that these tulips were planted in May in the eastern part of the park. He furiously grabbed Mike's jacket and started to question him about the origins of the bouquet. Mike confessed that these flowers are indeed from the eastern part of the park. The police officer rightfully confiscated the bouquet and Mike walked away. The police officer smelled the flowers and thought to himself that he can't throw them away in a trash bin, so he decided to gift the bouquet to his wife.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
