I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The given extract explores the topic of contemporary challenges and changes for the better caused by digital revolution for cultural places. The author emphasizes that the digital revolution is a global process that captures not only spheres that connected with technologies but also and, I dare to suppose, greatly in cultural life of society.

Obviosly, the works of art are the result of creative process however digital revolution has been helped a lot in this area. Despite the fact, modern technologies can distract people while visiting museums, they have various advantages in another perspective. The author higlights that museums and other cultural places definitely give people an ability to relax and relieve stress while visiting cultural places and getting so called "slow" experience. This fact makes people realize how valuable such places are. What's more, the digitization assist museums to attract more people and help them with getting accustomed to visiting cultural places.

Overall, I wholeheartedly agree with author's opinion that the digital revolution played an enormous role in offering new methods for engaging with museums that excessively helped in enlarging their reach and influence.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

In my opinion, every person has heard about great abilities of travelling at least once in his life. It is claimed that travelling to other cities or countries help people not only to broaden their horizons, get to know the world better, practice necessary skills of communicating with foreigners using foreign languages but also it can give a person an ability to understand himself. It may sound unbelievable though it is definitely a truth. To comprehend what the given saying means indeed, people need to travel alone. This experience is unforgettable. While visiting new places, seeing picturesque views and sights, meeting engaging people and learning about amazing cultures people experience a connection with themselves. It happenes because a person usually can't hear his thoughts and notions being burried in a monotonous work and mundane atmosphere of his city whereas this person can plunge into his inner world in another place with a unique atmosphere. You should have noticed that while travelling you fully enjoy the process and leave your difficulties and tiresome thoughts at home. People tend to find in travelling freedom and this feeling helps them to understand their wishes and needs, ideas and thoughts about the world.

All points considered, it can't be denied that travelling plays an enormous role in people's life as it gives them an opportunity to be themselves, to reveal their real inner world, to be sincere towards themselves and, as a result, to understand their own feelings better.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

Jack had gone to the university to study history, but at the end of his first year, his history professor failed him in his examinations, and he was told that he would have to leave the university. However, his father decided that he would go to see the professor to urge him to let Jack continue his studies the following year.

'He's a good boy,' said Jack's father, 'and if you let him pass this time, I'm sure he'll improve a lot next year and pass the examinations at the end of it really well.'

'No, no, that's quite impossible!' replied the professor immediately. 'Do you know, last month I asked him when Napoleon had died, and he didn't know!'

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

"Oh, it is such a basic question to ask! My son probably doesn't let the most common information to stay in his head!" tried to persuade a strict professor Jack's father, "I bet every student knows this significant date however Jack is the most creative and unusual boy in his class. I suppose, that's the reason why he wanted others to answer this easy question". The history professor gave Jack's father a suspicious look but said nothing. Jack kept silence for some time trying to understand what his father meant. One thought rapidly appeared in his head and made him indignant. "You assume that I don't know when he died? You dissapointed me. Of course, he died yesterday in my stomach!" claimed Jack happily. "What does it mean?" asked professor. "I ate the whole cake named Napoleon yesterday!" After such a statement Jack had to leave the university.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

The caricature is humorous and relatable series of pictures that capture a man with long greesy hair who makes a resolution to get a hairstyle one day. He is lucky to meet a professional hairdresser so he takes a chance and asks a worker to do something with his messy hair. It seems to me this man didn't waited for superb result. Nevertheless, the outcome turns out surprisingly perfect. However the author of this caricature makes the end of his pictures rather dissapointing for poor hairdresser as he has to deal with another man's hair that is in terrible condition. It can be seen that due to the fault of the first customer, the second one decided to get a hairstyle for free as well.

I absolutely like the main idea of the series of pictures. The author managed to depict that some people excessively use the kindness of others. A man who gets a new hairstyle was treated perfectly well by the hairdresser. Moreover, he obtains care and help openly and doesn't try to express his gratitude. Instead of necessary thanking this man tells his fellow about such successful visit on purpose which makes the whole situation even worse. The author made a great work sharing such a common case for society in pictures to give people who never thank others for their free help and advice an ability to feel quilty for such a despicable behaviour that gives helpers extra difficulties.

Overall, the conclusion that I can make from these pictures includes the following. People always should express their gratitude to those who assist them with something invarious ways. The most essential fact everyone should remember is that if a person helps you it does not mean he will help someone else next time.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress in Washington is certainly the largest library in the world. It's collections are incredibly diverse: books, manuscripts, photographs, volumes in Braille for blind, rolls of microfilm, magnetic tape, sheets of music and each other form of preserved thought.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest building devoted holly to library uses, occupies two city squares facing the Capitol Grounds. Begun in 1886, completed in 1897, the buildings cover about 3.5 acres. The main reading hall accommodates 1,000 readers at the time and is free to anyone above 16 years of age. To meet the continuant increase of the Library's collections a few annexed buildings were later constructed on the same grounds.

The Library is rich in musical events. An audience of 500 sits provides free concerts and lectures. Special facilities for serious research include 50 individual study rooms and a lot of special desks.
