I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

Museums as the Essence of Architecture

It is hard to separate a museum from its building. When we think of a museum, we typically picture its building before any work contained within. I. M. Pei's glass pyramid is surely far more symbolic of the Louvre as an institution than even the Mona Lisa. The reason is that in most instances museum buildings are specifically designed both as containers for a museum's collection and as symbolic summations of their contents and of the mission, meaning and identity of the institution as a whole.

The idea of architecture goes back much further than the museum. Yet one of the most intriguing things about museum buildings is that despite the untold diversity of their forms, as a distinct type of building, they embody the idea of architecture at its most fundamental. If architecture is at its essence about enclosure and containment, of defining a distinction between inside and outside, and of ritualizing the transition between them, then museums constitute the very essence of architecture.

Walking into a museum is like stepping into different world. The basic rules of our own still apply, of course – we still have gravity and laws of the land are still enforced, in addition to the rules imposed by the museum itself. However, other aspects are quite different. Politics and the history of power relations are present and live, but the museum also exists somehow outside of them. We see materials – stone, metal or timber – made to do things of such intricacy and virtuosity that they seem to defy human ingenuity. We bear witness to the remains of creatures millions of years old, to works of art with the power to provoke us, and to objects from strange and distant cultures seemingly unconnected to our own, yet united by the bond of human creativity and empathy that extends across millennia. And most profoundly, the museum is a space where these objects exist side-by-side, where the normal rules of time and space are temporarily suspended. Museums are quite different to the outside world; they are the archetypal example of what the French philosopher Michel Foucault termed a 'heterotopia' – a space that is both real and unreal, that mirrors the world in microcosm – which the museum establishes by bringing and juxtaposing objects from different times and places and presenting them as totality and with a reverence that borders on the sacred.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

Museums are very important for people. A person should think not only about the works in museum, but also about the building. The buildings also have their history. For example Louvre's building is really interesting and has a big history. People should know more about buildings because it is very important. Museums give us a lot of emotions that's why people should visit it.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel makes you a more grateful person.

Travel makes people more grateful because travelling gives ua an opportunity to see world. We meet people from different countries and understand that we have a lot in common. Despite the fact we speak different languages we experience positive emotions which gives us happiness and bliss. That"s why travel contributes to out gratitude. Travels broaden minds. Due to this activity we understand how many sided world is. Thus, we learn not only about local cultures, but we discover ourselves by comparing and experiencing different cultures. Travel gives us an opportunity to see new cultures, to taste new cuisines- to immerse in a different culture. That's why people feel thankfulness for travel which helps to shape their personalities.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

Jack had gone to the university to study history, but at the end of his first year, his history professor failed him in his examinations, and he was told that he would have to leave the university. However, his father decided that he would go to see the professor to urge him to let Jack continue his studies the following year.

'He's a good boy,' said Jack's father, 'and if you let him pass this time, I'm sure he'll improve a lot next year and pass the examinations at the end of it really well.'

'No, no, that's quite impossible!' replied the professor immediately. 'Do you know, last month I asked him when Napoleon had died, and he didn't know!'

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

"It is really bad that he did not know the date of the death of Napoleon but Jack knows a lot of other facts. For example, he knows all about history of England, USA, Russia and their rulers. He will learn all information the next year. Believe me, please. He needs some time to show himself. Give him one more year and you will see the result."

"Okey, I will give him 5 months to learn all."

"Thank you very much. I hope everything will be good"

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

This story is about two twins who decided to get a free hair cut. Richard was the first brother, Jack was the second. He went to the hairstylist and asked him to make a hair cut. His hair was very difficult, so the hairstylist spent a lot of time to cope with it. His new appearance was amazing. He became a beautiful and serious man. He started to look like a businessman. The hairstylist was very tired from work. So when Richard went away, he was very happy about this. He made a smart man from the ugly human. He started to clean his workplace, but the bell rang. " Oh, no" - he thought because he wanted to go home. " You can come" he said. Suddenly he saw

Richard with his previous hair, but it was Jack. All his work was spoiled. Richard asked the hairstylist to return money and give 100 dollars more because his hair became the same. Richard with the help of his brother wanted earned money. the hairstylist was very sad.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
