I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The author of the text suggests that we should look at the digital revolution and its impact on museums from a different angle. It is widely believed that in the era of smartphones and technology, museums have become a thing of the past. Nevertheless, the author of the text considers the digital revolution to be the driving force behind museums' popularity. It is thanks to the revolution that museums are experiencing a rebirth. Personally, I can agree with this point of view. With the help of technology, nowadays teenagers tend to visit museums more often, because for them museums are no longer associated with boredom, strict wardens and rules.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel makes you a more grateful person.

Everybody has a different view on whether travelling makes people more grateful. Some of them believe it is beneficial while others have absolutely opposite thoughts. Now I would like to comment the author's and explain my opinion on this issue.

From the one hand, travelling has its advantages. It broadens horizons, so it helps people to become more concious. Moreover, they can have a lot of communication with various people around the world, so it helps them to realize themselves in the future as perspective people. During travelling people usually meditate more, thanks to it, they begin to appreciate and value the beauty of our world. Their mind changes in a right way, they can learn more languages. As a result, memory updates, concetration increases and it can absorb more information.

From the other hand, travelling has its own drawbacks. For instance, people especially when they are in an unknown country can have quarrels with the locals as they do not know their traditions and culture properly.

To conclude, travelling plays a crucial role in life of everyone. I am absolutely sure that benefits far outweigh any potential risks.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A man and his wife had arranged to have a holiday at the seaside. They were waiting at the railway station for their train when the man saw a weighing-machine near the bench on which they were sitting. It was one of those weighing machines that give cards on which one's fortune is printed as well as one's weight.

The man decided to weigh himself, so he went to the machine, got on it, put a penny in, and a card came out. The man took it back to his wife, and she read it out to him, because he had not got his glasses.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

The statement written on a card was absolutely astonishing. The wife read aloud: "Your wight now is 70 kilos".

The thing why everybody was confused was that the man during his whole life was attempting to lose wight. It was his aim. He tried a lot of various techniques in order to be healthier, but when only he changed his mind, he could lose weight.

Since then, he became aware of some possible ways to reach his goal without any harm to his own body.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One day, a couple was given a vase full of mysteries by their servant. A husband claimed: "Is there any chance to sell it?" A wife found this idea to be suitable.

As they decided to get rid of it, they thought about selling it to the local gardener. He was hesitating about the right usage of this vase, so he was ready to resell it to his mate by really low price.

As the vase was sold to other owners, it reached its destination in a vintage store. Despite standing there for weeks and years, it was again noticed by the servant. This time she was looking a bit more mysterious, as she was wearing a coat with fur. "What an affectionate vase!" - she yelled and immediately bought it. When she finally came home, she considered the vase to be a nice gift to the couple she had known for years.

Whilst the process of giving the vase back to their owners, they glanced at it and were in an absolute shock as they had been already familiar with the gift.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress in Washington is certainly the largest library in the world. It's collections are incredibly diverse: books, manuscripts, photographs, volumes in Braille for blind, rolls of microfilm, magnetic tape, sheets of music and each other form of preserved thought.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest building devoted holly to library uses, occupies two city squares facing the Capitol Grounds. Begun in 1886, completed in 1897, the buildings cover about 3.5 acres. The main reading hall accommodates 1,000 readers at the time and is free to anyone above 16 years of age. To meet the continuant increase of the Library's collections a few annexed buildings were later constructed on the same grounds.

The Library is rich in musical events. An audience of 500 sits provides free concerts and lectures. Special facilities for serious research include 50 individual study rooms and a lot of special desks.
