I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The extract describes the impact gadgets have on those who attend museums nowadays. It is widely accepted that smartphones are now allowed in some galleries, contrary to the generally accepted rules. Moreover, modern gadgets influence the collections exhibited in museums, as they offer new possibilities of digital production. Besides, plenty of people wonder whether the digital revolution has begun to prevent us from visiting museums in person, as we now have lots of digital catalogues.

However, introducing more online opportunities concerning culture broadens the reach and impact of museums and allows us to see the world from a different angle. Therefore, more people are encouraged to go to museums in order to enjoy their collections. If we think carefully about it, the digital revolution may offer much more advantages than we actually expect.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel allows you to better understand and evaluate the bigger picture of your life.

It is no secret that millions of people travel around the globe every day. Some of them take time out of their hectic schedule to go and relax on a beach. Somebody is eager to learn new facts about the place they visit. After all, travelling may be a part of a person's job. What is most crucial about it, though, is that travelling influences us a lot. It presents a great chance to see and explore the areas you have never been to. It also enables you to get acquainted with the locals and their culture and have a better understanding of how diverse nations exist and perceive the world. Moreover, travelling encourages you to reconsider some of your values, especially after visiting poor countries or seeing those who will never be able to afford even a small part of what you own. Besides, the opportunity to enjoy spectacular views and breath-taking landscapes while travelling is a thought-provoking thing. When you see how beautiful our nature is, you begin to care more about saving and maintaining it. To sum up, the statement that travel allows us to better undestand and evaluate the bigger picture of our lives is rather true, as travelling expands our horizons a lot.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A man and his wife had arranged to have a holiday at the seaside. They were waiting at the railway station for their train when the man saw a weighing-machine near the bench on which they were sitting. It was one of those weighing machines that give cards on which one's fortune is printed as well as one's weight.

The man decided to weigh himself, so he went to the machine, got on it, put a penny in, and a card came out. The man took it back to his wife, and she read it out to him, because he had not got his glasses.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

"99 kilos!" she cried.

Mr. Brown blushed. Luckily, the train soon arrived and they appeared at the resort the following day.

When the couple entered one restaurant in the evening, they saw lots of people standing near... a weighing machine! The one whose weight was equal to 100 kilos had the right to receive 1000$.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown knew what to do. They had wonderful dinner with roastbeef and beer. An hour later, Mr. Brown went straight to the weighing machine and the card said... 100 kilos!

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

This ugly vase was a present from Mrs. Burns. The Greens could not imagine where she had bought it, but they had to get rid of it.

Mr. Green had an idea. His friend Henry had a shop where he sold flowers. Mr. Green appeared there, smiling widely.

"This wonderful vase will certainly attract more customers to your shop!" he said enthusiastically.

Henry took the vase and then went to his brother to ask for advice.

"Well, if you can't keep this horrible thing, give it to your new neighbour!" he laughed.

This was the solution. When Henry saw Mr. Black, he pushed the vase into his hands, describing how great it was.

Confused by the present, Mr. Black ran to his friend who agreed to have such an "antiquity' in his shop. A couple of hours later Mrs. Burns was going past the shop. She immediately spotted the vase.

"The Greens would be glad to receive another vase that will symbolize their love!" she thought.

The shock the Greens had the following day can't be properly described.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress was founded in 1800 for the use of either houses of Congress, the President and the Vice-President. In 1814 during the war with Great Britain the enemy soldiers marched into Washington, set fire on the Capitol and destroyed the Library of Congress. After the end of hostilities, the Congress set about to replace the collections on a far grander scale then the original one. In 1815 Jefferson's private library was bought and it was the foundation of a new Library of Congress – very different from one that has been burned. In 1840 it started a wide exchange program with many of libraries both at home and abroad. In 1897 the Library of Congress moved to its present premise.

The 19th century closed with a rise of professionalism in education, the proliferation of free public libraries, and the establishment of colleges and universities throughout the country. The resultant creations of libraries in every town and in every university campus called for organization and agreement on the science of librarianship. In a result, the American Library Association was established in 1876.
