I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. Breaking Down Barriers to Entry

The first and oldest of the three characteristics that define a museum is its collection; there is simply no museum without a collection. Yet the ways we typically understand a museum's collection is, and has always been, heavily weighted towards the objects themselves, rather than the arguably equally important series of decisions that determined how that collection was brought together. Moreover when we visit a museum we rarely see more than a tiny percentage of the objects in its collection. Again, the decisions about what to display and what to keep in storage are seldom acknowledged.

The second key characteristic of the museum is that the collection should be accessible to the public. However, that a collection is open to the public does not automatically mean those who visit are representative of the public. Museum audiences typically skew towards better-educated and more affluent demographics. Free entry is no panacea. Cost is just one barrier to entry, and, while important, may not actually be the biggest one. Social and cultural barriers can be just as strong. Despite some of their best efforts, museums are frequently perceived as elitist and unwelcoming – especially when housed in grand classical edifices as so many still are. Just as a museum cannot consider itself to be a truly public institution unless its staff's demographic makeup reflects the public at large, the same can be said of its audience. Museums cannot be properly public institutions unless they can reach and connect with everyone. Many museums are making huge and consistent efforts to do this, but what is required is perhaps something more profound. Rather than defining themselves as existing somehow beyond the quotidian realities of daily life, museums need to find ways to dissolve the boundaries that exist between them and the outside world – its identities, cultures, politics and everyday realities. Museums have already begun to look to the digital sphere which, as we have already seen, offers a range of new and transformative possibilities of connecting to, and engaging with, a much broader public.

This takes us to the third and final fundamental characteristic of the museum: that it is housed in a building which acts as both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission. This twin function has always been part of the concept of a museum.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

According to Owen Hopkins, one of the most important characteristics of a museum is its collection and the decisions behind it. I agree with this statement, becauset the selection of objects in a museum is a peculiar process, which is often overlooked.

Another characteristic of a museum provided by the author is its accessibility to the public. It is a good point, since museums are meant to educate people, which implies being available to everyone. Reaching out to the audiences through digital sphere will certainly stop people from viewing museums as "elitist".

The last characteristic highlighted by the author is a building, which serves not only as a container, but also as a symbol of the museum's collections. I find this to be true, because a museum has to create an athmosphere.

To recapitulate, the author provides good points about museums and suggests a way to solve a rising problem.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel makes you a more grateful person.

Robert Maisel, a renowned author, who wrote “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures”, once said that travelling makes you more grateful. So what did he mean by that? (28)

The more you travel, the more you see how people of different cultures live. Some may pleasantly surprise you, some may shock you and some may even terrify you! (57)At the end of the day, when you return home, where everything is familiar to you, you will be grateful for the things you have. Moreover, travelling broadens your horizons and you might be surprised to learn that there are people less fortunate than you, who could only dream of having a life like yours. After realizing that, you are sure to become more grateful for what you have.

As for me, the author's statement is true. I have some experience in travelling and after learning how people in other countries live, I realized that I could never acquire their mentality. Although I liked the countries I visited, I realized how much I cherish the environment I grew up in.

To conclude, I agree with Robert Maisel's quote about travelling. We are all lucky to have what we have and travelling makes you appreciate that more.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

Since the man didn't have enough money, he decided to leave the girl at the restaurant.
"I think I dropped my wallet while we were dancing, I'll go look for it!" he exclaimed.

The man had just got up, when three police officers suddenly appeared and commanded him to lie down on the floor. Petrified, he turned around and saw his girl-friend walking towards one of the men.

"Good job, Ms Green. We'll take it from here," said the officer.

Ms Green smiled, knowing she had just caught another fraud.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One summer day, a police officer caught a man stealing flowers from a public garden. He immediately stopped the unlawful citizen, teaching him a lesson about obedience and right decisions. The man was ashamed, as the officer had to take the flowers the man ripped from the garden. Moreover, the man had to pay a fine and the officer added him to the list of people who should be watched closely.

After the officer's shift ended, he couldn't help feeling proud of catching yet another disobedient citizen. Looking at the flowers in his hand, he knew exactly what to do with them.

The officer knocked on the door of his house and his wife came out.

"Surprise!" he exclaimed, giving the flowers to her.

The wife was flabbergasted. She gave him a surprised look and grinned:

"Oh wow! How did you manage to buy flowers, when you're so busy with work?"

"You know I always have time for my beloved wife," stated the officer, satisfied with his cheesy response.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress in Washington is certainly the largest library in the world. It's collections are incredibly diverse: books, manuscripts, photographs, volumes in Braille for blind, rolls of microfilm, magnetic tape, sheets of music and each other form of preserved thought.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest building devoted holly to library uses, occupies two city squares facing the Capitol Grounds. Begun in 1886, completed in 1897, the buildings cover about 3.5 acres. The main reading hall accommodates 1,000 readers at the time and is free to anyone above 16 years of age. To meet the continuant increase of the Library's collections a few annexed buildings were later constructed on the same grounds.

The Library is rich in musical events. An audience of 500 sits provides free concerts and lectures. Special facilities for serious research include 50 individual study rooms and a lot of special desks.
