I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

With many technological advancements of the XXI century, museums are affected mostly in a positive way. After digitalizing museum catalouges one would assume that this would diminish the number of people going to museums. However, it seemed to have the opposite effect, and drove more people there. The digital revolution has caused people to have a shortened attention span, and that is another reason to believe that people would stop visiting museums. On the contrary, people are looking for 'slow' experiences, that differ from their busy lives, and are drawn to museums. All in all, if museums embrace the digital revolution and adapt to the modern world, the number of people visiting museums will skyrocket.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

Travelling has always had the ability to connect people with themselves, uncover their full potential. People's day to day lives are incredibely monotonous, they are stuck in an endless cycle of "sleep - work - sleep" . When people travel, they get out of their comfort zones. Visiting new places, expiriencing unique cultures first-hand causes people to uncover different things about themselves. Many out of the ordinary situations can arise, and you have to figure out how to deal with it. This will help you understand more about your character, and your personality. For example, if you are in a foreign country and you do not know the language, you can find yourself in may stress situations, and the way you handle them will determine what kind of person you are. When you travel alone, you connect with yourself the most. The time that you spend in a new environment will allow you to reflect on yourself, your actions. You can 'put life on pause' , calm down, and mentally unwind. However, travelling is not only a way for you to spend time with yourself. You meet so many new people when travelling, that can bring out different sides of your character that you did not even know existed. All in all, travelling is a wonderful opportunity to deeply connect with yourself.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A man and his wife had arranged to have a holiday at the seaside. They were waiting at the railway station for their train when the man saw a weighing-machine near the bench on which they were sitting. It was one of those weighing machines that give cards on which one's fortune is printed as well as one's weight.

The man decided to weigh himself, so he went to the machine, got on it, put a penny in, and a card came out. The man took it back to his wife, and she read it out to him, because he had not got his glasses.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

The wife said: "Do not forget to take time away from work and rest - 80kg". Her husband laughed haughtily. "That is exactly what we are doing right now, baby!" - he said. They looked at the traintracks, which disappeared in the rolling grassy hills in the distance. Oh, how nice it was to take a break from the hustle and bustle of the city. The couple was filled with joy that they had planned this holiday. "I love you so much, my dear," - said the husband. His wife answered: "I love you more, honey". This moment lived on in their minds, and this felt like the best day ever.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One gray foggy London morning, I walked into the barbershop to get my monthly haircut. My hair grows out peculiarly fast, so it was already almost to my shoulders. My barber, Bill , was used to my unique hair, and did not ask any questions, he simply sat me down and started cutting away. The haircut took painstackingly long. After finishing with the haircut, and washing my hair, Bill tiredly looked at my squeaky clean head, and proudly said: "All right, you are all done!". I looked into the mirror and could not believe my eyes. I looked like a totally different person! I thanked Bill and hurried out the door. Right outside my the barbershop I stumbled upon my twin brother, out on his daily promenade. His hair also grows out incredibly fast, so we decided to prank Bill. My twin brother marched into the barber shop and yelled: "Hey Bill! I'm here for my haircut!". Bill was in utter shock. He could not say a single word, he only managed to stutter: "Wha.. How.. Bu.. But.. Not again!!". My brother and I could not stop laughing about the situation all week.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress in Washington is certainly the largest library in the world. It's collections are incredibly diverse: books, manuscripts, photographs, volumes in Braille for blind, rolls of microfilm, magnetic tape, sheets of music and each other form of preserved thought.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest building devoted holly to library uses, occupies two city squares facing the Capitol Grounds. Begun in 1886, completed in 1897, the buildings cover about 3.5 acres. The main reading hall accommodates 1,000 readers at the time and is free to anyone above 16 years of age. To meet the continuant increase of the Library's collections a few annexed buildings were later constructed on the same grounds.

The Library is rich in musical events. An audience of 500 sits provides free concerts and lectures. Special facilities for serious research include 50 individual study rooms and a lot of special desks.

VIII. Explain the meaning of the following words which reflect peculiarities of British / American cultures.

1). Elevenses

2). Electoral College

1). Elevenses

Elevenses is a short snack or small meal, usually taken around 11 AM, right between breakfast and lunch.

2). Electoral College

The purpose of the electoral college is to vote for the president and vice president. It includes representatives from each state. The number of representatives is proportional to the population of the state. For example, there will be more representatives from California than from Montana, because California has a higher population. The representatives are voted on by the people in the state every four years
