I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

It is hard to ignore the fact that digital revolution have influenced some spheres of our lives, and museums are no exception. This conditions, as some experts say, can lead to reduction of people going to museums. On the other hand, it has opened new methods of communicating with visitors. Due to these, a society can rise a number of adolescents visiting museums. The problem is that some people attracted by digital features of museums cannot realize a real value of these exhibition. Anyway, for instance, digitization of museums leads to availability of it for developing countries' citizens, which makes it possible to break a cultural barrier between people.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel makes you a more grateful person.

Travelling, being an essential part of many people's lives, has a great impact on people trying it. The secret of it is intrinsically in meeting new life habits, avoiding some daily routine and getting acquainted with people from different cultures. The last aspect is exactly one that makes you grateful. The more you meet people with different cultural values, different traditions and habits, the more you start to respect others' ways of living. Due to this fact a level of tolerance rises and you can fully understand people. Visiting other countries can make you feel a part of something new and strange after being surprised by citizens friendly meeting all tourists with respect. The sense of kindness works as an illness being spread among travellers and that's why people start being more grateful. Moreover, sometimes your principle collapse with a reality when you realize that people from other countries live worse than you. That makes travellers feel guilty about them talking how bad do they live, therefore, it leads to a great respect of others and a feeling of being grateful for things tourists already have in the motherhood.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

The girl noticed that something had gone wrong, but the boy was shy to tell the truth so he behaved aggressive. Being sad, the girl was crying in the toilet. Then she met a film star who was in the restaurant too. The girl told about the problem with the guy and after that the lady laughed and said that he shouldn't have worried anymore. As it turned out, a wealthy businessman lost a game, so he had to do what the lady would have said. She made him pay the bills for all tables of that restaurant, so nobody had to spend money.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

Mary and John were glad to meet Mary's aunt Mrs. Markle. The grandma was extremely naughty, so every gift they received from her was more of a torture than a present. That's what exactly happened with a vase the couple was given by her. The vase was too expensive, but Mary and John didn't want it to be at their home as it reminded of Mrs. Markle. John one day realised that his friend Will would be very happy to receive this vase as he had his own flower market. Surprisingly, Will didn't like this vase due to its low practical value, so during some party his friend George said he could give it to his friend Mike. Mike being a pragmatic man sold this vase to the antique store. Consequently, Mrs. Markle noticed the vase and decided to buy it. She came to Mary amd John saying that she had found an exact copy of their vase and decided to give it to them to multiply a number of vases. To Mary's relief, she didn't know it was that vase. Well, maybe it is fate of this stuff to stay at Mary and John's.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.

VIII. Explain the meaning of the following words which reflect peculiarities of British / American cultures.

(1). Prince of Wales

(2). Jim Crow laws

(1). Prince of Wales is one of heirs of the British Crown, now it is William. Actually, it implies a male nearest heir of the King. For example, before the death of Elisabeth the Second, this title was Charles 3', but when Charles became the King, this title was handed down to William.

(2). Jim Crow laws is a period in american history connected with segregation and black people discrimination. The origins of this word come from the play about a clown Jim Crow. That play was a symbol of perception of black people being stupid and worse than white people at all. So the laws in the history of USA being published to discriminate black peoples' rights were named as Jim Craw ones. They were abolished only in 20th century, and a lot of BLM activists refer to these laws as an instance of a significant problem of races' communication.
