I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The text discusses both positive and negative impact that the digital revolution has on the museums.

Firstly, despite being highly distractive and sometimes overbearing, technologies not only help in the process of art creation, but also become a new form of art themselves. On top of that, it is the digitalization that allows museums to attract visitors with the help of advertisements and web catalogues. 66

On the contrary, the "digital pollution" is perceived as a scourge by some individuals, while the museums are viewed as "safe havens" that are not influenced by it. Due to this, the implementation of digital aspects in museums is sometimes seen as something inappropriate.

In my opinion, every facility should be able to adapt to the social and technological changes in order not to become archaic, and there is nothing wrong with this change.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel allows you to better understand and evaluate the bigger picture of your life.

"Travel allows you to better understand and evaluate the bigger picture of your life," is one of the most profound notions a person may come across, as it reflects the importance of gaining new experience through visiting new places.

Some may argue that a simple change of location does not have the power to transform an individual's viewpoint, not to mention making one reflect on their entire life. Usually people with such an opinion have never had the chance to explore a completely new location on their own, and therefore cannot understand how life-altering a simple travel may be.

For instance, I have to move cities extensively because of my competitions that take place all across Russia, and not a single travel of mine left me without an opportunity to ponder on my life. When I got lost in Moscow for the first time, I had to learn how to use online maps, and when I was left without any food in a dormitory the very same day, I had to muster up the courage and ask other dormitory dwellers to help me out.

All in all, not a single minute of travelling leaves you without food for thought, and that is what makes it so valuable.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

"I need to use a restroom," he mumbled to his date, standing up.

Just like that, the young man vanished into thin air. Upon realizing what had just happened, the girl went still. Her expression slowly morphed into a vicious smirk.

"Jimmy!" she called the waiter.

"Yes, Miss Rochester?" he bowed to her.

"Put the guy that was with me in our blacklist. And send half of the bill to him via email, please."

"Will do," the waiter bowed again and hurried away.

"These silly men," she sighed, taking a sip of her wine.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

"What is this abomination of a vase doing in my house!" a young woman angrily whispered to her husband.
"My mom gave it to us last week, remember?" the man nervously chuckled, sensing his wife's fury. "I will give it as a present to Mr. Berton next weekend, don't worry."

"What is this ugly thing in your hand?" laughed Mr. Berton's friend next weekend.

"Well, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins gave it to me as a present. I guess I'll just give this thing to my brother tomorrow, as he loves to collect such knick-knacks," Mr. Berton tried to rationalize.

"What am I going to do with this parody of a vase?" Mr. Berton's brother sighed the next day. "I guess I'll simply sell it for a couple of pennies," he came to conclusion, heading to the local trinkets shop.

"Look what a beautiful vase I've found in the local shop!" Mr. Higgins mother exclaimed the same day. "Now you'll have two similar vases at home!"

A shiver ran down Mr. and Mrs. Higgins' spines.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress was founded in 1800 for the use of either houses of Congress, the President and the Vice-President. In 1814 during the war with Great Britain the enemy soldiers marched into Washington, set fire on the Capitol and destroyed the Library of Congress. After the end of hostilities, the Congress set about to replace the collections on a far grander scale then the original one. In 1815 Jefferson's private library was bought and it was the foundation of a new Library of Congress – very different from one that has been burned. In 1840 it started a wide exchange program with many of libraries both at home and abroad. In 1897 the Library of Congress moved to its present premise.

The 19th century closed with a rise of professionalism in education, the proliferation of free public libraries, and the establishment of colleges and universities throughout the country. The resultant creations of libraries in every town and in every university campus called for organization and agreement on the science of librarianship. In a result, the American Library Association was established in 1876.

VIII. Explain the meaning of the following words which reflect peculiarities of British / American cultures.

(1). Prince of Wales

(2). Jim Crow laws

(1). Prince of Wales.

"Prince of Wales" is the formal title given to heir apparent to the English, and, later in history, British throne. King Charles III had been "Prince of Wales" until the death of his mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

(2). Jim Crow laws

"Jim Crow laws" are the laws in the Unites States, untroduced in late 19th century and abolished in 1965. They enforced the racial segregation of black people in the US, diminishing their rights. "Jim Crow" is a general term black people were referred to during these times.
