I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. Breaking Down Barriers to Entry

The first and oldest of the three characteristics that define a museum is its collection; there is simply no museum without a collection. Yet the ways we typically understand a museum's collection is, and has always been, heavily weighted towards the objects themselves, rather than the arguably equally important series of decisions that determined how that collection was brought together. Moreover when we visit a museum we rarely see more than a tiny percentage of the objects in its collection. Again, the decisions about what to display and what to keep in storage are seldom acknowledged.

The second key characteristic of the museum is that the collection should be accessible to the public. However, that a collection is open to the public does not automatically mean those who visit are representative of the public. Museum audiences typically skew towards better-educated and more affluent demographics. Free entry is no panacea. Cost is just one barrier to entry, and, while important, may not actually be the biggest one. Social and cultural barriers can be just as strong. Despite some of their best efforts, museums are frequently perceived as elitist and unwelcoming – especially when housed in grand classical edifices as so many still are. Just as a museum cannot consider itself to be a truly public institution unless its staff's demographic makeup reflects the public at large, the same can be said of its audience. Museums cannot be properly public institutions unless they can reach and connect with everyone. Many museums are making huge and consistent efforts to do this, but what is required is perhaps something more profound. Rather than defining themselves as existing somehow beyond the quotidian realities of daily life, museums need to find ways to dissolve the boundaries that exist between them and the outside world – its identities, cultures, politics and everyday realities. Museums have already begun to look to the digital sphere which, as we have already seen, offers a range of new and transformative possibilities of connecting to, and engaging with, a much broader public.

This takes us to the third and final fundamental characteristic of the museum: that it is housed in a building which acts as both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission. This twin function has always been part of the concept of a museum.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The extract discusses the three characteristics that define a museum.

The first characteristic is a collection. However, more attention is paid to the objects themselves, rather than to the decisions that brought the collection together. In most cases visitors see only a tiny percentage of the objects in the collection of the museum.

The second characteristic is the accessibility of the collection to the public. The cost of the visit isn't the major problem. Social and cultural barriers are important, as museums are often seen as places for better-educated people. Museums can be considered as public institutions only if they can be reached by everyone. The efforts that are made to overcome this problem are not enough.

The third characteristic is the housing of museums. As a rule the building is both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

'Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself' is a statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel.

I agree with it because it illustrates the main goal of travelling - to understand yourself. When you travel you visit different countries and cities, and, therefore, you, firstly, face new people. It helps you to understand which people you like and don't like. Secondly, you get to know other cultures with their values, believes and views of the world. You analyze them and it helps you to discover something new about yourself, broaden your horizons and reflect on your personality. Thirdly, during the journey you face different situations, pleasant or unpleasant ones. The need to cope with them helps you to gain life experience, to get to know how you react on different situations, to develop the ability to pull yourself together and keep going. Not to mention the fact that travelling can make you change your opinion on different aspects of life.

All in all, travel helps you to discover hidden personality traits, to develp the ones you already have and find peace with yourself.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

Jack had gone to the university to study history, but at the end of his first year, his history professor failed him in his examinations, and he was told that he would have to leave the university. However, his father decided that he would go to see the professor to urge him to let Jack continue his studies the following year.

'He's a good boy,' said Jack's father, 'and if you let him pass this time, I'm sure he'll improve a lot next year and pass the examinations at the end of it really well.'

'No, no, that's quite impossible!' replied the professor immediately. 'Do you know, last month I asked him when Napoleon had died, and he didn't know!'

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

'But he told me that you were studying ancient Rome, not Napoleon!' argued the father.

'It doesn't matter, Sir! It's common knowledge!' answered the professor.

'So, tell me the date when Napoleon had died,' asked Jack's father with a sly smile.

'I... Napoleon...' mumbled the professor.

'So you don't know, huh? But it's common knowledge...' teased the father.

'Okay. Jack can continue his education. Just make sure he'll pass the examinations at the end of the year,' answered the professor.

Jack's father left the room feeling like a hero.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One day David was going to visit his girlfriend Jane. They were having a date. Unfortunately David was broke and didn't have money to by flowers for his beloved. In the park he saw a bed of flowers. He decided to pick them so that to give them to his woman, though it was illegal. He carefully picked the flowers, making sure no one saw him.

David started walking to the exit of the park, covering the flowers with his coat. He was passing by the policeman Tom. Suddenly David felt someone grabbing his collar. 'Sir, I guess you did something illegal,' said the policeman in a strict voice. 'I did...' answered David. 'In this case I take the flowers away. And you have to pay a fine for damaging public property,' said Tom, taking the flowers from David's hands. David was frustrated. Now he had no flowers, no money and had to pay the fine.

As soon as David left, Tom went home with a satisfied smile to present his wife the beautiful flowers.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
