I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The extract above talks about the effect the digital revolution has had on museums. The author comes to a conclusion that the effect has been more positive than negative, while acknowledging the potential threat that museums might be facing.

I agree with the author that digital technologies are more helpful to museums than they are harmful. One benefit not mentioned in the text is how such technologies can be applied to enhance visitors' impression of a museum. For example, VR technology has been introduced in some historical museums, allowing visitors to experience the past directly. Digital archives, which solve the problem of preserving vulnerable collections, are another positive innovation.

In conclusion, I agree with the author. However, the threat that he describes is almost minimal, especially considering the possible benefits of digitization.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

In the book "Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures", Robert Maisel writes, "Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself." This quote means that while travelling, people discover something about themselves and their personality.

I strongly agree with this statement. Firstly, travelling takes one out of their "comfort zone" and allows them to discover how they would behave in conditions that differ from their ordinary life. For example, a person might test their communication and problem-solving skills by travelling to a country the language of which they do not speak.

Secondly, a journey around the world exposes a person to a variety of different cultures through the lense of which they might analyse their own values. For instance, a trip to Africa made a lasting impression on Nikolai Gumilev, a famous Russian poet, and inspired him to write many of his poems. Furthermore, different cultures have different religious beliefs and practices, some of which a person might adopt.

In conclusion, Robert Maisel managed to include a very important message in his book. Travelling does not only connect people with different cultures; it also allows them to better understand themselves.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

The food and drinks they had ordered were so expensive he couldn't afford them! So, he decided to flee. He excused himself and went to the restroom, planning to escape through the window.
However, while he was trying to climb out, he saw his favourite actor, Ryan Gosling, enter the restroom! "What are you doing?" Ryan asked. The man explained everything.
Gosling was angry at the man's hypocrisy, but still decided to foot the bill for him. "And next time take your lady somewhere you can afford," he added.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

On Fred and Mary's wedding, Mary's mother, Velma, gifted them a remarkably hideous vase. The couple deemed it tasteless, so they decided to get rid of it discreetly without offending Velma. "What if I give it to my boss on his birthday?" Fred suggested, and Mary agreed.

Upon receiving such a present, Fred's boss showed it to his friend and he burst out laughing. "Ha ha, it's as ugly as sin! Give it to me, maybe I could gift it to my secretary instead of a pay raise." Well, he did exactly that, and the secretary sold the old-fashioned vase to an antique store to gain at least a little extra money.

A month later, while Velma was window shopping, she saw the same exact vase she had presented to her daughter and son-in-law standing in an antique store. Needless to say, she was furious and came over the same day to give them a piece of her mind!

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
