I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. Breaking Down Barriers to Entry

The first and oldest of the three characteristics that define a museum is its collection; there is simply no museum without a collection. Yet the ways we typically understand a museum's collection is, and has always been, heavily weighted towards the objects themselves, rather than the arguably equally important series of decisions that determined how that collection was brought together. Moreover when we visit a museum we rarely see more than a tiny percentage of the objects in its collection. Again, the decisions about what to display and what to keep in storage are seldom acknowledged.

The second key characteristic of the museum is that the collection should be accessible to the public. However, that a collection is open to the public does not automatically mean those who visit are representative of the public. Museum audiences typically skew towards better-educated and more affluent demographics. Free entry is no panacea. Cost is just one barrier to entry, and, while important, may not actually be the biggest one. Social and cultural barriers can be just as strong. Despite some of their best efforts, museums are frequently perceived as elitist and unwelcoming – especially when housed in grand classical edifices as so many still are. Just as a museum cannot consider itself to be a truly public institution unless its staff's demographic makeup reflects the public at large, the same can be said of its audience. Museums cannot be properly public institutions unless they can reach and connect with everyone. Many museums are making huge and consistent efforts to do this, but what is required is perhaps something more profound. Rather than defining themselves as existing somehow beyond the quotidian realities of daily life, museums need to find ways to dissolve the boundaries that exist between them and the outside world – its identities, cultures, politics and everyday realities. Museums have already begun to look to the digital sphere which, as we have already seen, offers a range of new and transformative possibilities of connecting to, and engaging with, a much broader public.

This takes us to the third and final fundamental characteristic of the museum: that it is housed in a building which acts as both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission. This twin function has always been part of the concept of a museum.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The extract from "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins provides insightful commentary on the evolving nature of museums and their relationship with the public. It highlights the importance of breaking down barriers to entry,both physical and cultural, to ensure museums truly serve as public institutions.The text underscores the need for museums to reflect the diversity of their communities in both their staff and audience demographics.

Moreover, it suggests that museums must embrace digital platforms to broaden their reach and engage with a wider public.By challenging traditional notions of elitism and exclusivity, museums can fulfill their mission of connecting with and serving the entire community, thereby becoming more inclusive and accessible spaces for all.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

In “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel, the assertion that travel has the power to connect individuals with themselves is profound and resonant.Through travel, individuals are often removed from the familiar comforts and routines of their everyday lives, creating an opportunity for self-reflection and introspection.

Experiencing new cultures, landscapes, and ways of life can serve as a mirror, allowing travelers to examine their own values, beliefs, and identities in contrast to those they encounter.Additionally, navigating unfamiliar situations and challenges while traveling can foster personal growth,resilience, and self-confidence.

Moreover, travel provides a platform for individuals to step outside of their comfort zones,confront biases and preconceptions, and cultivate empathy and understanding for others. This process of self-discovery and connection can lead to a deeper sense of self-awareness,purpose and fulfillment.

Overall,Maisel's statement underscores the transformative potential of travel beyond merely visiting new places; it emphasizes the profound impact it can have on one's inner journey and personal development. Through exploration and engagement with the world, individuals not only broaden their horizons but also deepen their connection with themselves, ultimately leading to greater self-discovery and growth.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

In a panic, the young man fumbled through his wallet, realizing he had forgotten his credit card.Embarrassed, he explained the situation to his date,expecting disappointment.But To his surprise, she simply smiled and reached for her own purse."Don't worry" she said softly,"let me take care of it this time" Grateful and touched by her kindness, he knew in that moment he had found someone special. And as they left the restaurant hand in hand, he vowed to always cherish her.

One bright afternoon, a man was walking down the street, enjoying an attractive flower bed.Suddenly,an unexpected burst of emotion seized him, and he realized that he desperately wanted tom pick some of these flowers.

Without giving a word to himself, the man plucked several buds in pink and purple. The fragrant petals became his treasure, filling his heart with warmth. However, he suddenly felt the stern gaze of a policeman standing nearby.

The policeman approached the man? stopped him and severely scolded him for illegal act.Nobility in a police uniform was an integral feature of his character,and he decisively issued a fine to the offender.The man was very upset, realizing his mistake.

Meanwhile, the policeman happily took the flowers and carried them to his beloved wife with a smile on his face.His long hours of service were replaced by a sweet and charming rest in the arms of his wife/Smiling< she accepted his gift, and real joy and gratitude sparkled in her eyes.

So, an initially sad and disappointed man witnessed how his thoughtless action brought joy to others. And even though his heart was heavy from the mistake, he fully understood that he would never pick a single flower from the flower bed again without permission.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress was founded in 1800 for the use of either houses of Congress, the President and the Vice-President. In 1814 during the war with Great Britain the enemy soldiers marched into Washington, set fire on the Capitol and destroyed the Library of Congress. After the end of hostilities, the Congress set about to replace the collections on a far grander scale then the original one. In 1815 Jefferson's private library was bought and it was the foundation of a new Library of Congress – very different from one that has been burned. In 1840 it started a wide exchange program with many of libraries both at home and abroad. In 1897 the Library of Congress moved to its present premise.

The 19th century closed with a rise of professionalism in education, the proliferation of free public libraries, and the establishment of colleges and universities throughout the country. The resultant creations of libraries in every town and in every university campus called for organization and agreement on the science of librarianship. In a result, the American Library Association was established in 1876.
