I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The given extract elaborates on the digitization in museums.

The digital revolution changed the way people experience museums. Nowadays we can see each visitor holding a mobile phone in order to capture what they see. Moreover, digitization influenced the production of works of art or everyday industrial designs. Many people believe that digital objects present several challenges, such as distraction, shortening attention spans, which prevent us from enjoying exhibits in museums, and digitization of museum catalogues, which will probably reduce the number of visitors. On the contrary, online museum encourage people to visit in person. Personally, I think that it is necessary to implement advanced technologies in museums to make visits more captivating.

To conclude, digitization in museums is very important as it increases the interest in what is displayed there and encourage visitors to broaden their cultural horizons.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

The following statement means that while travelling you can understand your feelings, desires, thus connecting you with your inner self.
It is a well-known fact that people are hard-working in many countries. It requires a lot of strength to cope with tasks that your boss set you to complete. And if you are in charge of other people, it is even harder. When you are just a student, it is difficult to deal with homework, upcoming deadlines or exams, but you have to because parents will be disappointed in you if you fail. Every person sets impossible goals to achieve and, as a result, the failure exhausts them. But how about holding your horses and changing the environment?

Travelling provides you with the opportunity to forget about deadlines, impossible goals, exams. It gives you a chance to explore the world. For instance, you can go on a trip around just one country and find out interesting features that are peculiar for each town, such as dialects, traditions, cuisine, or you can travel around the globe and make new acquaintances. Thus, you will find out what is interesting for you, what you crave after.

To conclude, travelling is very important for those, who are exhausted by work or studying and want to stay with themselves for a while.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A man and his wife had arranged to have a holiday at the seaside. They were waiting at the railway station for their train when the man saw a weighing-machine near the bench on which they were sitting. It was one of those weighing machines that give cards on which one's fortune is printed as well as one's weight.

The man decided to weigh himself, so he went to the machine, got on it, put a penny in, and a card came out. The man took it back to his wife, and she read it out to him, because he had not got his glasses.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

'The weight is 100 kilograms! And the fortune is 'travelling with a young beauty'??' shrieked the wife.

At first the man didn't enjoy the weight but he started smiling at the last sentence. A woman saw it and slapped him.

'What are you thinking about, huh?' cried the woman.

'I-I, darling, it's not what you think about. It's just hilarious, you know.' stammered the man.

'What is hilarious about being a fat hog?!' she screamed.

The man felt relieved and promised to exercise every day and eat less. Maybe the young beauty will come...

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

'CAN YOU FIX MY HAIR A BIT?'

In a city of Neverknow there lived Mr. Hairy who was famous for his long and thick hair. But he didn't them as everyone mocked him calling him a monkey. Mr. Hairy was also tired of always brushing his hair, which always got tangled. Moreover, it was exhausting for him to go for a walk on a hot day. So, he decided to get rid of this problem.

Mr. Hairy went to a local salon and asked a hairstylist:

'Can you fix my hair a bit?'

This phrase was irrelevant as there was a lot of work. Hairstylist with sweat trickling from his forehead washed, shaved Mr. Hairy and even plucked hairs in his nose. The customer looked perfect. 'Nobody will call me the monkey', thought delighted Mr. Hairy.

He went out of the salon and went for a walk. The sun was shining, wind pleasantly rustled leaves on trees. Mr. Hairy immensely enjoyed himself until he heard children's laugh. He turned and saw them rolling with laughter.

'Monkey, monkey!' His hair was on its place again!

Mr. Hairy returned to the salon with the same question. The hairstylist removing a bunch of his customer's hair almost fainted.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
