I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. Breaking Down Barriers to Entry

The first and oldest of the three characteristics that define a museum is its collection; there is simply no museum without a collection. Yet the ways we typically understand a museum's collection is, and has always been, heavily weighted towards the objects themselves, rather than the arguably equally important series of decisions that determined how that collection was brought together. Moreover when we visit a museum we rarely see more than a tiny percentage of the objects in its collection. Again, the decisions about what to display and what to keep in storage are seldom acknowledged.

The second key characteristic of the museum is that the collection should be accessible to the public. However, that a collection is open to the public does not automatically mean those who visit are representative of the public. Museum audiences typically skew towards better-educated and more affluent demographics. Free entry is no panacea. Cost is just one barrier to entry, and, while important, may not actually be the biggest one. Social and cultural barriers can be just as strong. Despite some of their best efforts, museums are frequently perceived as elitist and unwelcoming – especially when housed in grand classical edifices as so many still are. Just as a museum cannot consider itself to be a truly public institution unless its staff's demographic makeup reflects the public at large, the same can be said of its audience. Museums cannot be properly public institutions unless they can reach and connect with everyone. Many museums are making huge and consistent efforts to do this, but what is required is perhaps something more profound. Rather than defining themselves as existing somehow beyond the quotidian realities of daily life, museums need to find ways to dissolve the boundaries that exist between them and the outside world – its identities, cultures, politics and everyday realities. Museums have already begun to look to the digital sphere which, as we have already seen, offers a range of new and transformative possibilities of connecting to, and engaging with, a much broader public.

This takes us to the third and final fundamental characteristic of the museum: that it is housed in a building which acts as both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission. This twin function has always been part of the concept of a museum.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The Owen Hopkins mentions in the text the key aspects of musem: its collection, public accessibility, the significance of its difficult building. It stresses the importance of the whole process behind storing collections and making them equally significant.

Public access is not just about entry fees, but also about adressing social and cultural barrier. To be trully institutions, museum should enhance diversity in staff and audience, breaking down barries with outside world.

Digital platforms offer new engagement opporutnuties. The physical musem building not only houses the collections but symbolizes its tution, showing the museum identity. The focus is on museums that can be accesible to the public, moving beyond the traditional approach.

In essesence, the extract underscores the imperative for museums to transsend convetional methods and actively persue enclusivity, accessebility and contemporary relevance to authentically operate as public establishment.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

In “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel, the statement that "Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself" resonates deeply with the essence of personal transformation through explorations. Travelling offers a unique opportunity for self-discovery, pushing individuals out of their comfort zones and immersing them in unfamilliar cultures, landscapes and experiences.

Through travelling, individuals often compround values and perseptions, getting a deeper understanding of themselves in the process. Being away from familiar surroundings can act as a mirror, reflecting one`s true essence, desires, and aspirations. Moreover, challenges and triumphs encountered during travel contribute to personal growth, resilience, and self-awareness.

By engaging with divercity of cultures, meeting new people, and explore unfumiliar territories individuals gain valuable insights into their own strength and passions. Travel becomes a transformative journey that not only broadens horizons but also fosters introspection, leading to a more profound connection with one`s inner self. Ultumately, travel serves as a catalyst for self-exploration and personal development, enabling individuals to forge a deeper relationship with themselves.

Overall, this statement suggests that through experience of travel, a people become more aware and connected with themselves. The travveling helps to find the contact between a person and his inner self and develop strong self-awareness.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

As the young man stared at the bill, he had a lay of embarassment washed over him. He nervously thumbled through his wallet, hoping he had enough to cover the expenses. Just as he begun to panic, his girlfriend`s warm hand bended on him, offering the surance.

"Don`t worry I had an amazing time with you tonight. Let`s split the bill," - she leaned in and whispered.

The young man was touched by the connection they shared, and he knew that this was the start of something special.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

One warm sunny day, an ordinary men passed by a flowerbed. The sweet scent of flowers was in the air. After looking around, making sure there is no people nearby, he picked a whole bunch of beautiful flowers.

Passing on, he unexpectebly met a large policeman, who whith intimidating smile demanded the return of stollen flowers and issued a fine. A man with mixed feeling about his act gave away the stollen flowers and payed the fine. However, after a while, the same policeman, turned out to be not moral at all. An hour later he was already standing with the door next to his house with the bouquet in his hands, ready to present it to his wife with a smile.

So, at fist glance a fair policeman, who took a fine from an ordinary person, allowed himself an immoral act and took the stollen flowers.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress was founded in 1800 for the use of either houses of Congress, the President and the Vice-President. In 1814 during the war with Great Britain the enemy soldiers marched into Washington, set fire on the Capitol and destroyed the Library of Congress. After the end of hostilities, the Congress set about to replace the collections on a far grander scale then the original one. In 1815 Jefferson's private library was bought and it was the foundation of a new Library of Congress – very different from one that has been burned. In 1840 it started a wide exchange program with many of libraries both at home and abroad. In 1897 the Library of Congress moved to its present premise.

The 19th century closed with a rise of professionalism in education, the proliferation of free public libraries, and the establishment of colleges and universities throughout the country. The resultant creations of libraries in every town and in every university campus called for organization and agreement on the science of librarianship. In a result, the American Library Association was established in 1876.
