I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. New Challenges

Unable to resist the digital tide, museums have begun to allow smartphones to be used in their galleries. Stepping into a gallery occupied by an even moderately famous object we now find ourselves adrift in a sea of screens held aloft as each visitor tries to capture what's in front of them.

As well as shaping the way we experience museums, the digital revolution has also altered how and what they collect. Screens have offered not only new possibilities of digital consumption, but of production. Even if the object produced at the end of a creative process – whether a work of art or of everyday industrial design – remains physical, the process itself is very often digital.

Things are rather more complex when the object itself is digital. Some of the most influential 'objects' of the last decade are apps. But how does a museum collect an 'app'? Does it collect the source code from the developer? Or the app package that we download onto our phones? But which version? And if the app is a conduit to a broader network or platform, do we have to collect that too?

Again, while presenting clear challenges, these questions can be answered in a variety of ways and from those answers a series of 'best practice' guidelines developed. And insofar as digital distraction and shortening attention spans diminish our experience of a museum, there is the counterargument that in a media-saturated world, what many people are looking for are the kinds of authentic, 'slow' experiences that museums are uniquely placed to offer. Meanwhile, the increasing digitization of museum catalogues has led to the prediction that their presence online would reduce the number of people who would then subsequently visit. On the contrary, the more museums put online the more, it seems, people are driven to visit in person.

So, while potentially threatening the role and status of the museum, the digital revolution has in fact offered new ways to engage with museums and their collections, which potentially dramatically expand their reach and impact. If we accept that the digital revolution offers a new way of experiencing the world, then the museum has the potential to act as a vital platform for the new forms of cultural interaction.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

The passage describes how digital technology is changing museums. According to the text, visitors' interactions are changing since screens take up most of the viewing experience and traditional collecting procedures are being challenged, especially when it comes to digital artifacts like apps. In the digital age, this change raises concerns regarding what and how to collect.

The truth is more complex, despite worries about digital diversions and even declining in-person visits. Digital involvement has broadened the audience for museums and stimulated interest regarding in-person visits, indicating that online and offline encounters can enhance one another rather than conflict. As a result, museums are faced with a difficult decision: how to embrace digital innovation while maintainig their conventional functions in order to provide audiences with engaging, real experiences? This delicate balancing act demonstrates how museums are constantly evolving.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel allows you to better understand and evaluate the bigger picture of your life.

Robert Maisel's insights in "Transform Throught Travel: Connecting Across Cultures" underscore the outstanding influence of travel on enhancing self-awareness and broadening perspectives. Stepping into unfamiliar territories and being immersed in new cultural experiences forces individuals to introspect and cosider their lives against the backdrop of the world's rich diversity. This journey of discovery deepens one's comprehension of their role within the international community, sparking a reassessment of their core values, beliefs, and objectives.

Travel serves as a reflective tool, casting the intricacies and simplicities of existence against a wider canvas. It confronts established perceptions and prejudices, fostering a refined understanding of the shared human condition across various cultures. By interacting with diverse individuals and navigating unknown enviroments, travelers develop empathy, flexibility, and a willingness to embrace new ideas.

Maisel's perspective emphasizes trevel's role in personal transformation, proposing that it extends beyond mere physical movement to encompass emotional and cognitive growth. This unique experience allows individuals to perceive their lives in a significantly wider context, leading to clearer vision and purpose through an apperication of humanity's collective heritage and the wonders of the natural environment. Such insights prove invaluable, enriching one's worldview and informing their responce to various life challenges and prospects.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A young man had a new girl-friend, whom he wanted to impress, so he invited her to go to a world-famous restaurant with him one evening. They dined wonderfully and had numerous drinks; they danced until midnight, and there was a polished musical entertainment. The girl enjoyed the entire evening, and was suitably impressed by everything she saw, including several film stars.

Then the waiter brought the bill at the end of the evening, and when the young man saw how much he had to pay, he was so shocked by the total that he went as white as a sheet.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

Realizing he couldn't possibly cover the bill with what was in his wallet, the young man swallowed his pride and explained the situation to his girlfriend. Surprisingly, she laughed it off, insisting they could split the bill. Together, they managed to pay. On their way out, she looked him in the eye and said: "You are the first one who confessed about not having money. I've been scamming guys in this restaurant for a year, and it's only now that I kind of feel bad about it." The young man didn't know what to respond. "Next time, the bill's on me!" - she giggled and dissapeared in the crowd.

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

George, enamored by Clara from the town, often strolled through the tulip fields, pondering how to win her heart. One radiant morning, inspiration struck; he would give her the field's most beautiful tulips. Unfortunately for him, these tulips were considered state property - and consequently, his attempt to gather a bouquet was briefly interrupted.

Mr. Bradley, the head of the local police department, approached George, blowing the whistle angrily.

"What to do you think you're doing young man?" - Mr. Bradley was out of breath, but his fierce appearance had the effect needed.

"I...I was gathering flowers for our town mayor - she asked me too!" - George said, trying to look as gullible as possible.

Officer Bradley looked at him with a frown:

"Hmm... If you're telling the truth, let me deliver the flowers myself".

"But..." - George tried to argue.

Mr. Bradley ripped the bouquet away from poor George and ten minutes later he was knocking at the mayor's door. She opened the door and her jaw dropped: "Oh my God, Jeff, this is the most beautiful gift you could've possibly gotten for our anniversary!"

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress in Washington is certainly the largest library in the world. It's collections are incredibly diverse: books, manuscripts, photographs, volumes in Braille for blind, rolls of microfilm, magnetic tape, sheets of music and each other form of preserved thought.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest building devoted holly to library uses, occupies two city squares facing the Capitol Grounds. Begun in 1886, completed in 1897, the buildings cover about 3.5 acres. The main reading hall accommodates 1,000 readers at the time and is free to anyone above 16 years of age. To meet the continuant increase of the Library's collections a few annexed buildings were later constructed on the same grounds.

The Library is rich in musical events. An audience of 500 sits provides free concerts and lectures. Special facilities for serious research include 50 individual study rooms and a lot of special desks.

VIII. Explain the meaning of the following words which reflect peculiarities of British / American cultures.

1). Elevenses

2). Electoral College

1). Elevenses

"Elvenses" is a term used in British culture to describe a short break taken around 11 a.m. to consume a rather small snack and typically a hot beverage such as tea or coffe. This mid-morning refreshment serves as a brief respite from activities or work and often includes biscuits, cakes, or a small sandwich.

2). Electoral College

The Electoral College is a unique system used in the United States for the indirect election of the president and vise president. It is composed of a group of electors from each state who cast their votes for the presidental and vise-presidental candidates based on the popular vote in their state. The number of electors per state is determined by the number of representatives and senators from the state. The Electoral College system has been a topic of debate in the U.S. due to its complexities and potential discrepancies between the popular vote and the electoral vote outcome.
