I. Comment on the following extract (use 100–150 words).

The Museum Now. Breaking Down Barriers to Entry

The first and oldest of the three characteristics that define a museum is its collection; there is simply no museum without a collection. Yet the ways we typically understand a museum's collection is, and has always been, heavily weighted towards the objects themselves, rather than the arguably equally important series of decisions that determined how that collection was brought together. Moreover when we visit a museum we rarely see more than a tiny percentage of the objects in its collection. Again, the decisions about what to display and what to keep in storage are seldom acknowledged.

The second key characteristic of the museum is that the collection should be accessible to the public. However, that a collection is open to the public does not automatically mean those who visit are representative of the public. Museum audiences typically skew towards better-educated and more affluent demographics. Free entry is no panacea. Cost is just one barrier to entry, and, while important, may not actually be the biggest one. Social and cultural barriers can be just as strong. Despite some of their best efforts, museums are frequently perceived as elitist and unwelcoming – especially when housed in grand classical edifices as so many still are. Just as a museum cannot consider itself to be a truly public institution unless its staff's demographic makeup reflects the public at large, the same can be said of its audience. Museums cannot be properly public institutions unless they can reach and connect with everyone. Many museums are making huge and consistent efforts to do this, but what is required is perhaps something more profound. Rather than defining themselves as existing somehow beyond the quotidian realities of daily life, museums need to find ways to dissolve the boundaries that exist between them and the outside world – its identities, cultures, politics and everyday realities. Museums have already begun to look to the digital sphere which, as we have already seen, offers a range of new and transformative possibilities of connecting to, and engaging with, a much broader public.

This takes us to the third and final fundamental characteristic of the museum: that it is housed in a building which acts as both container and symbol of the museum's collection and broader mission. This twin function has always been part of the concept of a museum.

(From "The Museum. From its Origins to the 21st Century" by Owen Hopkins)

There are several aspects that influence the way museums are seen by the publicity. The three main charachteristics of a museum are its collection, accessibility to the public and the building where it is housed.

These fundamental criterias estimate how efficient a museum brings its mission into the world. The thing is that the concept of a museum itself is initially multifaceted as it consists of different elements and each element should be sophisticated if a museum is dedicated to fulfill its ambitions.

I am firmly concerned that museums are highly important in terms of educating and entertaining people. Whether the collection is poor or superb, whether free entry is available or not, whether the building is appropriate or not, the key thing is that museums should keep up with modern tendencies to be closer to a wider public because the historical, cultural heritage has to be accessible, understandable and catching.

Summing up, museums hugely influence people's minds and hopefully more and more of them will use stste-of-art technologies and other techniques to make museums attractive to everybody.

II. Comment on the statement from the book “Transform Through Travel: Connecting Across Cultures” by Robert Maisel (use 180–220 words):

Travel has the ability to connect you with yourself.

Travelling has always been a way to reach escapism. Getting away from it all is becoming more and more popular with the increase of workload these days. Robert Maisel states that travelling is a good way to connect you with yourself. It cannot be argued that it is a complete true and the increasing popularity of travelling is caused by this very aspect of it.

Firstly, in a dynamically changing world people tend to work and study more and more. But humans naturally have to have rest and travelling is one of the best options. It helps you change the atmosphere around and discover something new about the world. For instance, when my family and I travelled to Spain, we found out that my brother is gifted at dancing. The thing is that there could be no other possible circumstances when we would be able to discover these things. It leads to a point that travelling offers an opportunity to broaden your horizon and find something unexpectable actually suit you.

Secondly, in my country there is an increasing demand for renting a country house over a weekend to get away from it all and enjoy the peaceful nature in a village. At certain point people become fed up with the noisy, dirty, fast-paced city life and they just want to keep to themselves or spend some time with their families only, It helps them recharge their batteries and start feeling alive again. Even a travel to the outskirts of a big city may help you finish feeling burnt out and connect with your adequate self again.

Summing up, travelling offers a wide range of opprtunities. It may help you discover your talents, find your life psth or just unwind and start feeling alive again.

III. Write the appropriate ending to the story given below (use 60-90 words):

A man and his wife had arranged to have a holiday at the seaside. They were waiting at the railway station for their train when the man saw a weighing-machine near the bench on which they were sitting. It was one of those weighing machines that give cards on which one's fortune is printed as well as one's weight.

The man decided to weigh himself, so he went to the machine, got on it, put a penny in, and a card came out. The man took it back to his wife, and she read it out to him, because he had not got his glasses.

Think of the ending to the story and write it in the space below.

"Well, hopefully, you haven't got your glasses, you would be surprised right now", said she.

"What's the matter with my weight? I don't have a foggiest idea how many are..." was he saying but suddenly a train has come and the wind caused by it blew the card with a man's weight away.

"Oh, we gotta go and I'll only tell you your weight if you buy me a brand-new swimming suit when we arrive", said the wife.

The man grumbled something to his nose and answered devotedly: "Sure, my darling".

IV. Create your own story based on the series of pictures (use 150–180 words):

A man was wandering in the park heading to a meet a lady he fell in love with. Suddeny he saw a perfectly neat flowerbed with tulips. Those were so wonderful that the man decided to pick some for his lady because she was as magnificently beautiful as those flowers were.

The man looked around, nobody was near, so he tiptoed to the flowerbed and picked a perfect bouqet of tulips when suddenly he realized somebody was right in front of him dismissively looking at the bouqet. It was a policeman. The man tried to pretend nothing was wrong and he just kept going. But the policeman had different plans. He picked the man by the collar of his jacket and made the man give flowers to him.

Well, of course the policeman also fined the man but it wasn't his main concern. The man was devastated because the lady of his dreams was left without any tulips when she deserved all the flowers of the world.

The policeman, adversely, was chrmed by the beauty of the tulips. He has brought them to his wife who has loved the bouqet and even forgave her husband for being late from work.

This is how one bouqet made one women miserable and another - full of happiness.

V. Find and underline ten mistakes (lexical and grammar) and write the wrong variant in the left and the correct variant in the right column of the table below the text.

The Library of Congress

The Library of Congress has millions items in over 125 languages and a myriad of formats. To provide access to this materials, a number of catalogs has been created on cards, in book-form, in micro-form, and in machine-reading form.

The Main Catalog, maintained for the public, and the Official Catalog, maintained for the stuff, provide an overview of the resources of the Library. The Old Catalog refers to the existing card catalogs for material cataloged through 1980. The New Catalog refers to the bibliographic file containing all post-1980 cataloging with the acception of certain cataloging data for material in non-Roman scripts.

The information explosion of the last 25 years has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and accessing of information via new, more efficient methods. Not only it has become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, but the acid contents of most paper manufactured in the 19th century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust. Consequently, attempts are currently being made to preserve information in less perishable and more compact form. The computerization of the Card Catalog is only the most visual aspect of a multi-million-dollars revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become.
